

Dear Parents,

As you may already know, we as a school try our utmost to provide yourselves with any guidance or workshops that would be beneficial for home and learning.

Children nowadays are so computer-literate they are able to access all kinds of apps and games etc. I came across a great opportunity, where NSPCC and O2 work together to provide parents with training and information. I for one, from a parent point of view, will be happy to learn anything possible to help with online apps and access.

The free workshops will give parents the skills and knowledge to understand the internet and technology as children do – from online games and cyber bullying to setting up privacy settings and controls.

The session will be delivered by trained NSPCC staff and volunteers, and will enable us as parents or grandparents to come together to learn how to keep children safe online.

Please fill in the form below and return to school by next Monday to book your place.

The workshop will be held on Thursday 15th March from 1.15pm and will last an hour or so.

We hope that this workshop will be supported by you. Thanks for your continued support.
